Killin - Scottish Week

Killin Highland Lodges, Southern Highlands

Walking: Spectacular high level or low level walking is available in the vicinity of our lodges. There are over 30 Munro's who's starting point is within 20 minutes' which makes Killin an ideal base for "Munro Bagging" especially Glen Lyon, Ben Lawers and the Tarmachan Ridge. The Rob Roy Way which runs from Drymen, near Loch Lomond, to Pitlochry in highland Perthshire also passes through the village.

Climbing: Weem & Glen Ogle are both mainly sport. Otherwise Dunkeld, Glencoe or Arrochar I reckon. If you're after a decent selection of quality lower grade trad climbs you'd probably be best getting yourself up to Glencoe. Plenty to go at and the crags are not all at the top of the hills after stiff walks. Killin is good for hill walking and winter climbing but not really the summer rock capital of Scotland.

MTB: Dumyat is a decent rough natural climb / descent but gets busy at weekends. Ben cleugh perhaps as well. The sustrans route along Glen Ogle (Lochearnhead / Balquidder station – Killin) is very nice in an undemanding way and there is a possible return along the remains of the military road which is a bit broken up and faint now. Glen Ample (do south to north) is a nice run as well – return via the road or a possible but hard work return via the next pass east. Cycling etc: The National Cycle network passes through (Sustran S Route No 7) and on through quiet Glens and little used routes. There are also designated cycle tracks through nearby forest parks and Forest Enterprise has way-marked cycle routes through many of its woodlands. The lower part of the River Lochay and the head of Loch Tay provide a most beautiful wild environment for canoeing and kayaking!

LODGES: Two lodges with a mix of doubles, twins or singles, all linen supplied. The lodges are situated on a south facing wooded hillside with views over the village (with its famous Falls of Dochart) and to the hills on the south side of Loch Tay. Free Wifi is provided in public areas and every lodge can receive a free Wifi signal in at least one room. The Lodges are rated as 4 star and 3 star by VisitScotland. STUFF you need to know: A popular week and we'll fill this without a doubt. First come, first served and unfortunately - a £30 deposit required (usual conditions apply). BEST PUB: Nearby, there's a good selection of traditional pubs, modern bars and restaurants - just a short walk to the village. We will probably get a Tesco delivery! COST: £85 for the week, plus a nominal amount if we group cater.
